HISTORIA

See The Blind Guitarist.

This cartoon was delivered to the Royal Tapestry Factory on 24 January 1780, along with ten other cartoons, completing the decoration of the antechamber to the bedroom. These eleven tapestry cartoons - almost certain to have been made between 21 July 1779, when the artist delivered A Stickball Game and The Swing, and this delivery in January 1780 - were executed very rapidly. It is very likely that Goya was aware of the planned suspension of manufacturing work at the factory and was anxious to finish his commissions and receive his wages.

This tapestry cartoon was one of the six stolen from the basement of the Royal Palace in Madrid before the large-scale transfer of works to the Prado Museum in 1870 (see Children with a Cart). The painting later belonged to the Linker collection in Bilbao, where it remained up until 1920. It then came to be in the London collection of the Durlacher Bros., who sold it to the museum where it is housed today.

ANÁLISIS ARTÍSTICO

This overdoor piece was designed for the east wall of the antechamber to the bedroom, facing the tapestry of The Rendezvous.

A doctor sits and warms his hands over some hot coals, accompanied by two students. Gudiol points out the vibrant red of the cape and the skill that Goya demonstrates in depicting everyday moments such as this one with such harmonious colours and forms.

Comparing the current dimensions of the work with those Goya recorded on the invoice, we know that the cartoon has had a vertical strip around 31 cm wide removed from the left-hand side. A balustrade was painted on the missing portion, as we can see on the resulting tapestry and in an old photograph that appeared in the decade of the 1980s, showing the work as it was when it belonged to the collection in Bilbao.

The finding of the photograph and the subsequent discovery of the balustrade completely changes the scene depicted in the cartoon. Without this crucial detail, the figures had appeared to be outdoors, in the open. We now understand that they are on a terrace, next to a house.
